ERIC KANT WORLD OF INTERIORS

We are proud to present this remarkable and diverse selection of interior architecture projects from the Eric Kant portfolio. They include a preview of a villa in Ibiza and a view of the spa designs first unveiled in Eric Kant's World of Interiors.

Each of these projects is the result of our 'total concept' approach to design. It's an approach that involves working very closely with our clients to create environments that fit their users like a glove and we apply this approach equally to apartments, luxury residences, hotels, restaurants, spas and other commercial establishments. It is our starting point and guiding principle for every commission.

Eric Kant's design process begins where you would least expect it to and goes beyond that of standard interior architects. As a result, the earlier a client becomes involved in the process, the better for all parties and the project as a whole. Such close collaboration from the earliest possible stage allows him to minimise the chance of needing to compromise any aspect of the design further down the line. The myriad possibilities offered by a space, and thus its potential, are often difficult for homeowners to see, especially when it's been their home for a long time.

But for Eric Kant, it is absolutely essential that he identifies and distils all these possibilities into a home that fits its inhabitants like a glove. It is on account of this quest for the perfect fit that he first spends as much time as is necessary getting to know his clients, familiarising himself with their lifestyle, rhythm and needs before ever approaching the drawing board. He then incorporates all he has learnt into three preliminary design concepts, thus allowing clients to see and choose from a variety of routes to fulfilling their every wish.

Eric Kant and his international team of specialists approach each assignment with a devotion to craftsmanship, attentiveness to detail and an uncompromising quest for perfection that is as strong today as it was when he opened his practice almost a quarter of a century ago. It is a degree of passion that time and time again yields unique, practical yet delightfully surprising designs, implemented with durable, robust and timeless materials.

The goal each time is for spatial compositions defined by balance and coherence. After all, a house is more than just somewhere for its inhabitants to eat, watch TV and sleep. It's in recognition of this greater significance that Eric Kant strives to delight his clients and support their wellbeing to the greatest possible degree with homes tailored to their every need.

His ability to realise his client's desires to such a degree is partly attributable to talent, but also to his deep understanding of design, craftsmanship and materials, all of which have been honed through years of experience. It allows him to deliver homes in which love can reside and in which to luxuriate every day. And when a home reflects its inhabitant's most heartfelt desires, it is a home with a soul.
